I'm a proud mom of 4 beautiful children. I struggled with my own personal body image 2 years ago. So I decided to do something about it, I became a model. To support all women that struggle with their body image. It's ok. You're not alone.

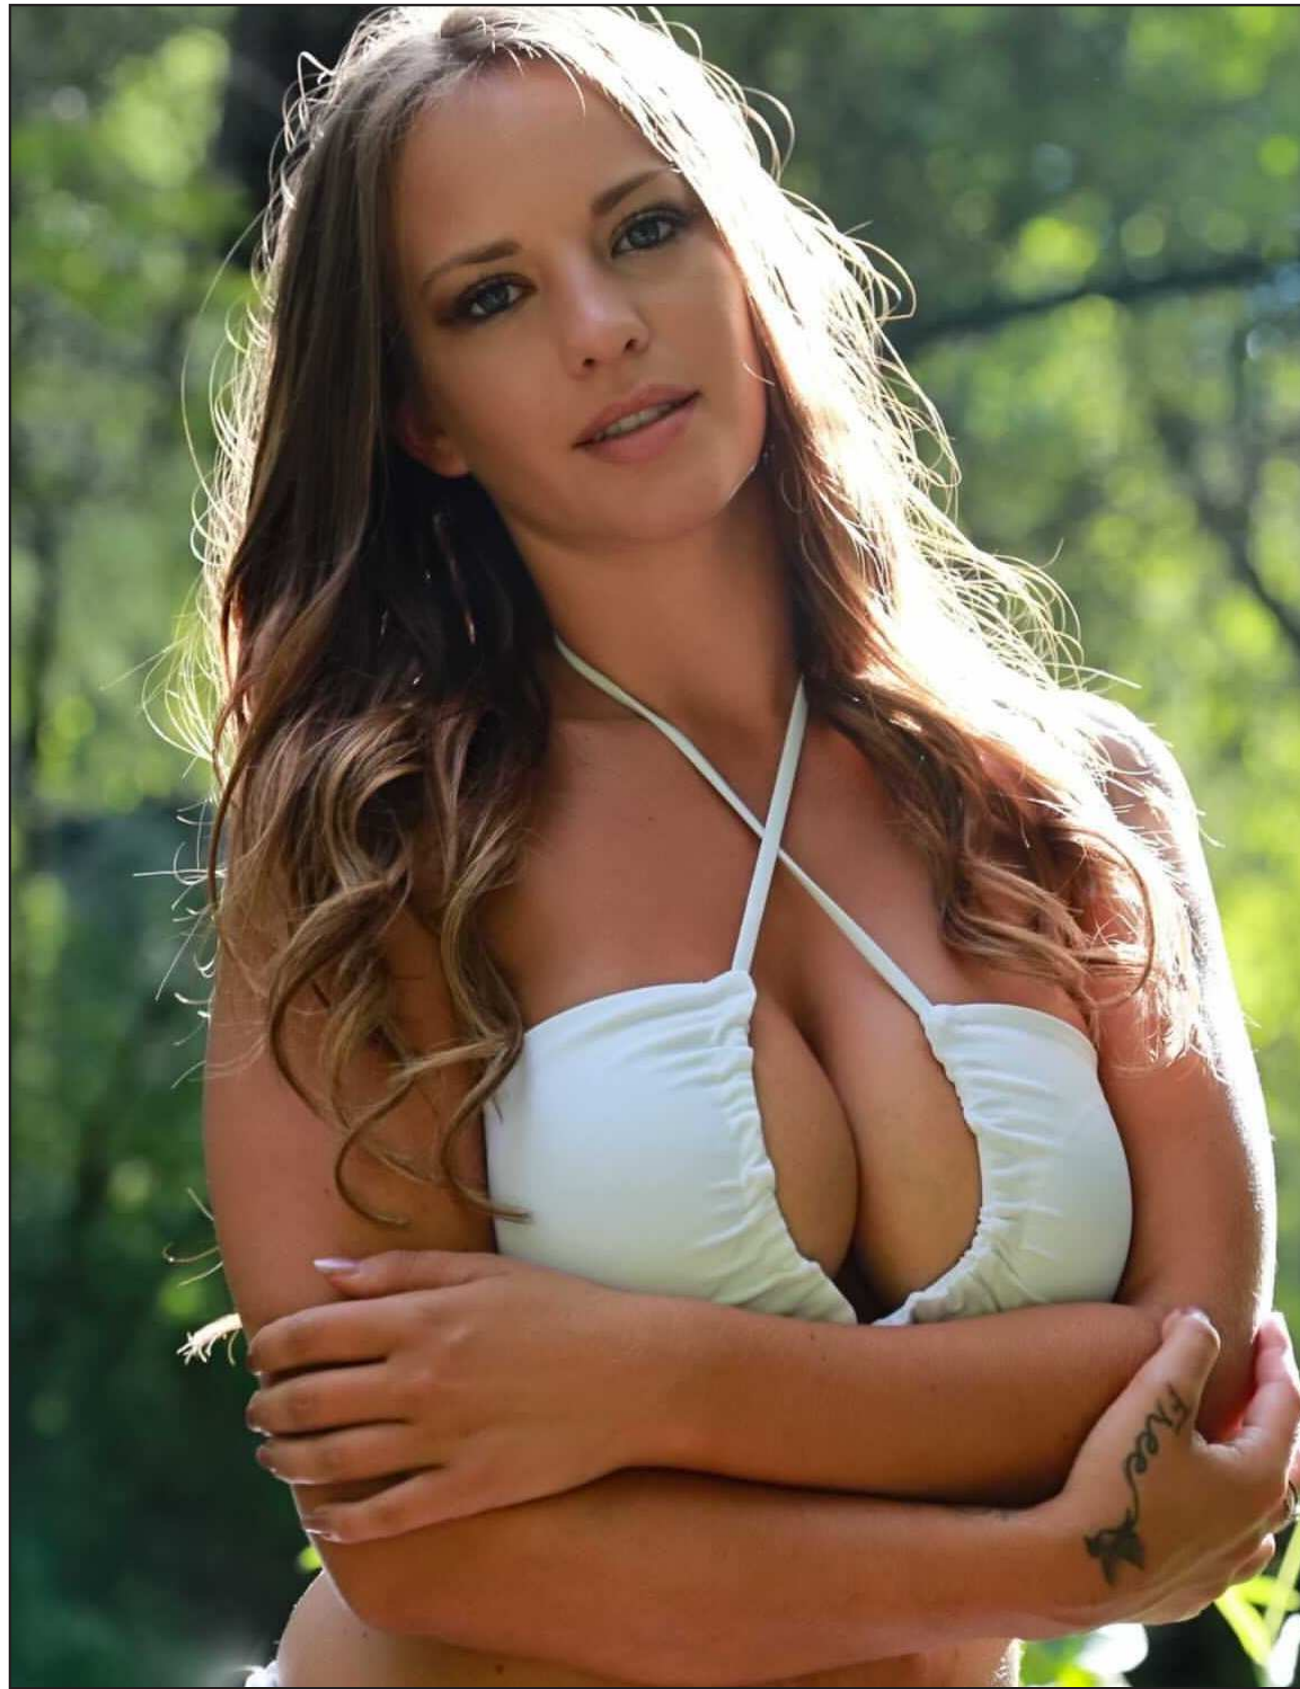

I have accomplished many goals already. Helping women learn to love their bodies by showing off my own imperfections and success with my body goals. It's not easy. But it's worth it. I want women to see me and think "wow if she can do it, so can I". There is no competition. We are in this together. You're beautiful no matter your size.

Stay Blessed

Hello I am Sailem rayne I've always had a big dream of making it as a model, and by meeting Michael Kostopoulos he's made that dream achievable. He since has gotten me in magazines, and seen by people around the world. I grew up in a small town where there just wasn't much happening. I cared for my grandmother as much as I could as she was caring for me in my early years. As she passed when I was 15 I moved in with another grandmother and am caring for her, because she has lupus, still in this small town I call home. I dream one day to make travel to find a new place to call home in a bigger area. I enjoy hiking and collecting beautiful crystals and gems. I longboard when I can and write stories of all genres. I care for my beautiful mackerel tabby cat Nightfury, she is like my child and I love her deeply. I live a simple and quiet life in my small town but I dream of something more.

My dream has always been to push my self to become what I've never thought possible for me. I push my self and show up for myself even when I don't feel like it or am fearful because I'm doing so I have always been led to greater heights or opportunities. I dream to become the best person I possibly can and just spread hope, love and kindness in the world. To go after your dreams and get over that fear.

I am a 40+ professional woman who recently embarked on a journey to dip my feet into the modeling agency. I have done so with a goal to encourage industry and brand professionals to continue to add more diversity in their use of "real people" models. While they have begun to do so, there still exists many barriers for models that don't fit the mold, so to speak.

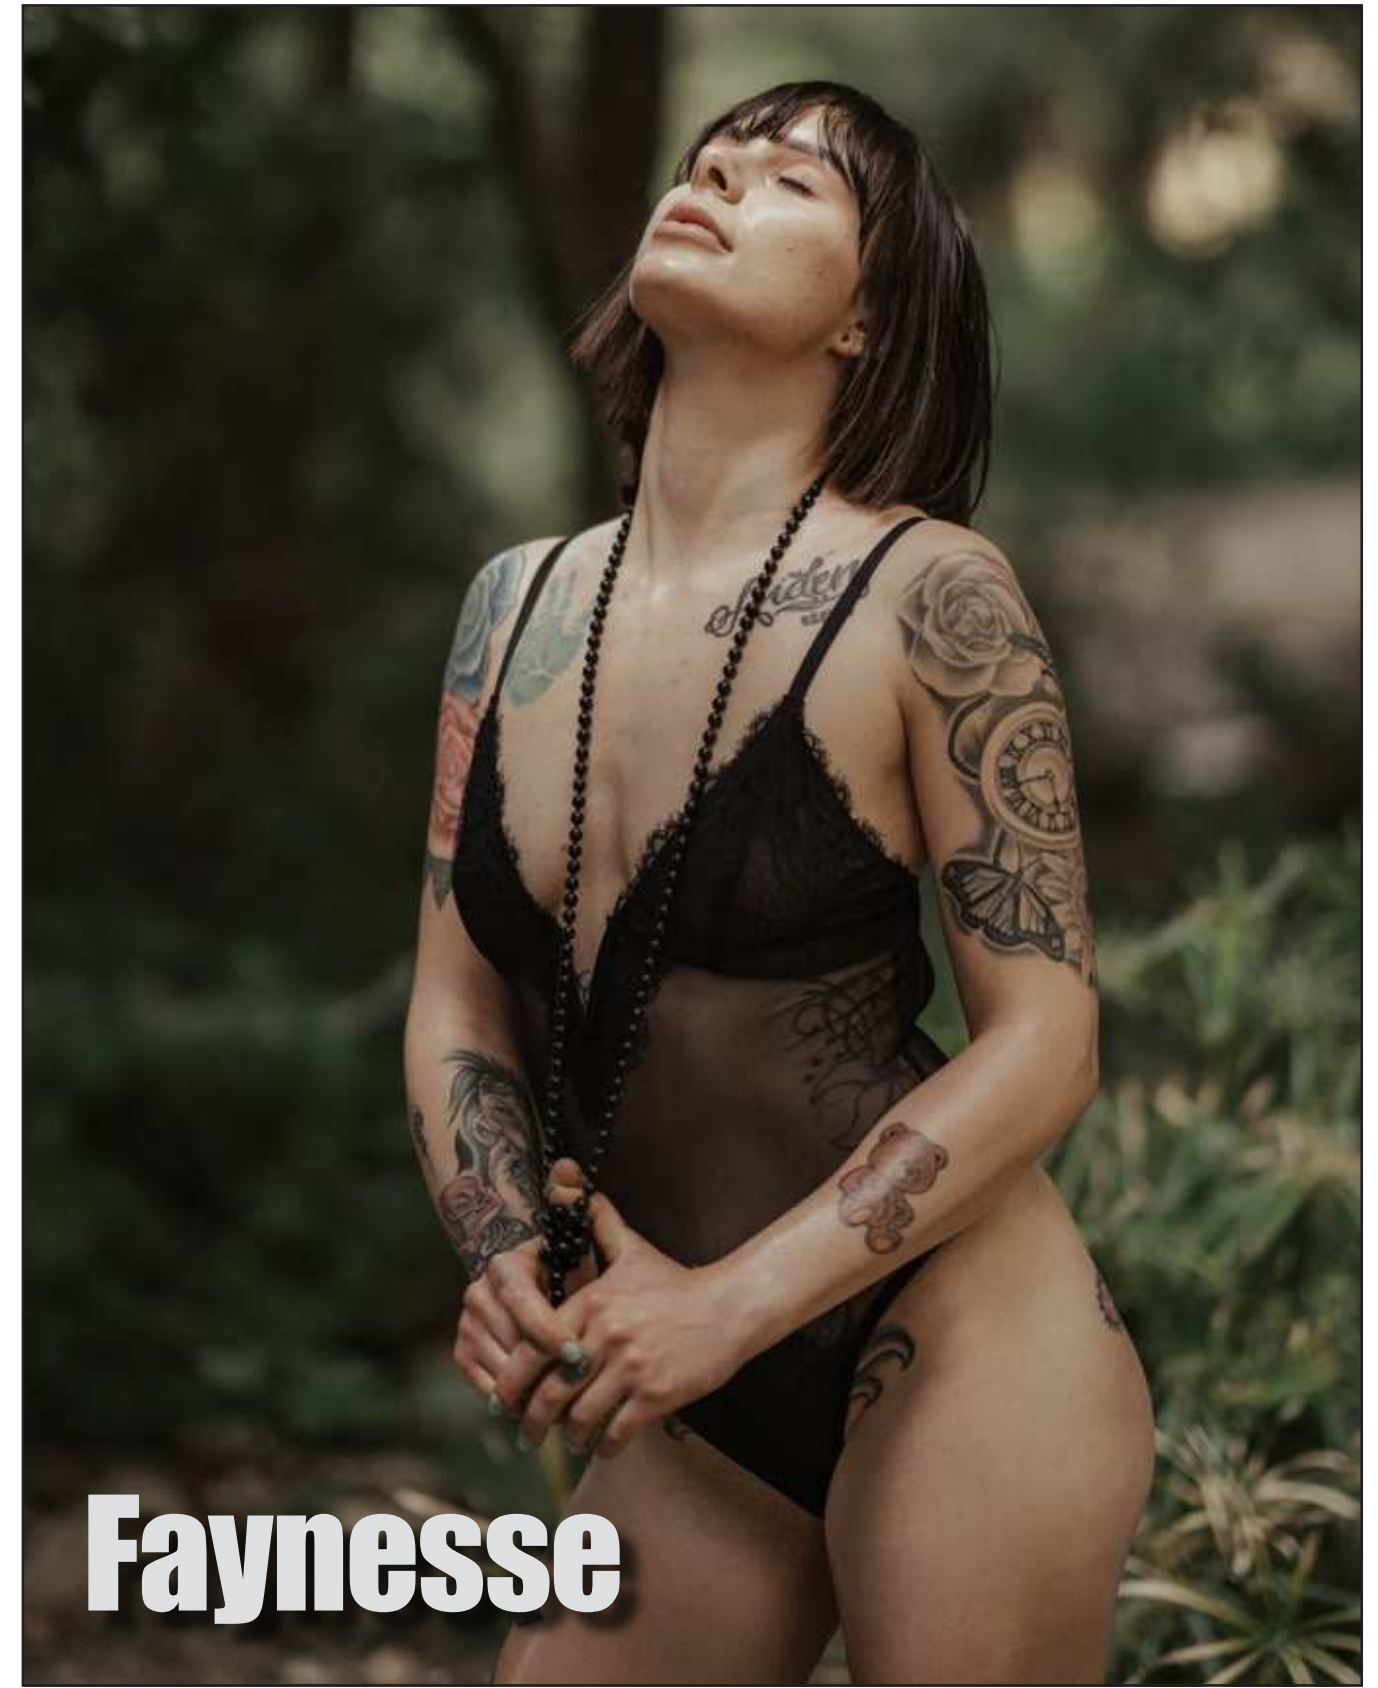

For example, I am a truly "petite" model at 5'1" and nearing age 50, without thousands of $$$ accessible to me to spend on elaborate photo portfolio shoots. So it has not been easy entering this work successfully, but I'm determined to keep trying! So far, in just this past year, I have been successful in building a diverse and extensive modeling portfolio (mostly through TFP shoots), entered and finished 2nd/group in the 2021 Ms. Health &

Fitness competition, been signed by national modeling agencies, built/published my own website, and been published in 5 different magazines including a cover/editorial! And all while continuing to work my "day job"!

From here I hope to turn my attention to some continued paid modeling work with those in the industry who are ready to bring me on board (along with my professional enthusiasm) in representing all the style and beauty our GenX women have to offer! If I'm lucky, maybe I'll even be fortunate enough to grace the cover of a SI Swimsuit edition once I hit 50!
